Hi Greg,

Thank you for pushing another look at this. A Driveway Approach Permit is not required as the driveway is existing and there will be no modifications. The storm information submitted with the BP will also be adequate for the site plan review. We will keep you updated as we continue the review process.

Thank you,

Should have also asked about the request for Driveway Approach Permit. Is one required since we are using the existing approach with no modification?

Hi Greg,

I'm not doing the Land Use review on this one, but I did see that full plans and calculations were uploaded under the BP and they have been routed for review. I notified Laurel Christian (cc'd) who is doing the Land Use review that these were submitted. That should alleviate that completeness comment pending any major design flaws discovered during the review.

Message	Regarding 21-119953-RP: The public works completeness review indicated there is no stormwater design. This project is also submitted for building permit review under 21-118473 BP in which there should full civil plans and calculations uploaded. If they were not, I can get them to you via Dropbox. I do not yet have access to upload to the portal. Let me know what you need. Thanks, Greg
