Hi Beth;

Nice to talk with you today; As I mentioned on the phone – the only regulatory requirement moving forward is that your contracting team have the IDP in place and on site during any ground disturbing activity (it is attached).

Also- while it is not required – I would encourage your Contracting team to reach out once it gets close to development starting and attend one of our Tribal Roundtables. As I mentioned, the site directly to the west of this property is a highly sensitive and important pre-contact/indigenous site, so the Tribes will most likely stop by after construction has started – and I want to be sure they don't hold up your development because they haven't had a chance to understand the scope/nature of your project and that the team will be using an IDP.

Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Thanks,

Kimberli
